Catalogue of Mental Health Measures

NEWS & UPDATES

What's new on the Catalogue?

The Catalogue has its own DOI!

More and more researchers are using the Catalogue to identify existing data in long-running studies, discover and explore the variables collected at each wave of data collection, and learn more about how to access these data when planning their studies. To reference the Catalogue, users can now formally cite it using its newly-established DOI: Catalogue of Mental Health Measures (year). Catalogue of Mental Health Measures. King's College London. doi.org/10.18742/pub01-230

As always, keep an eye out for new sweeps across studies such as WCHADS, Born in Bradford and Understanding Society.

Catalogue of Mental Health Measures

CLOSER 2026 Conference
Help shape the programme

closer — Cohort & Longitudinal Studies Enhancement Resources

The CLOSER 2026 Conference 'Today's values and tomorrow's challenges for the longitudinal research community' will take place in Central London on 4 November 2026! Have your say on which issues should be prioritised via this survey by 12 December 2025 at 17:00 GMT.

Did you know? Since its launch six years ago, the Catalogue has had over 45,000 users!

Want to unsubscribe from the mailing list of the Catalogue of Mental Health Measures? Click here

The Atlas of Longitudinal Datasets

The Atlas reached a milestone:

2,500 and counting! longitudinal datasets on the platform - ready to be discovered!

Like the Catalogue, the Atlas now also has a DOI for users to reference in their studies: Atlas of Longitudinal Datasets (year). Atlas of Longitudinal Datasets. King's College London. doi.org/10.18742/pub01-231

SEPTEMBER 2025 — SRA SOCIAL RESEARCH ASSOCIATION — research matters — Introducing the Atlas of Longitudinal Datasets — By Elena Triantafillopoulou, PhD student and research assistant, King's College London, Georgina Brown and Siann Hirani, research assistants, King's College London

Read about the origins of the Atlas in Elena, Georgina, and Siann's latest blog for the September issue of the Social Research Association's magazine Research Matters.

Atlas of Longitudinal Datasets

Team updates

We welcomed Izzy, who is an undergraduate psychology student at Loughborough University, for her research placement year. Izzy has been contributing to the expansion of the Atlas while also working on other projects in the PALM team. We're all excited to be working with her and for the year ahead!